The Experience of Coming Out for Lesbians
Sexually Abused in Childhood

Nancy E. Schapiro

Dissertation submitted to the faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy in Counselor Education

Penny Burge, Co-Chair
Hildy Getz, Co-Chair
Marcie Boucouvalas
Kerri-Lynn Kriz
Lynette Long

March 15, 2005
Blacksburg, Virginia

Keywords: Childhood Sexual Abuse, Lesbian, Coming Out, Sexual Identity, Hermeneutic-Phenomenology
ABSTRACT

Although existing literature is rich with descriptions of the process of coming out for lesbian women, the present study is distinctive in its systematic examination of coming out from the perspective of lesbian women who were sexually abused as children. Through the hermeneutic-phenomenological analysis of interviews with selected participants who identified as lesbian women, the objective of this study was to identify and describe participants’ perspectives of childhood sexual abuse, coming out experiences, and their perception of how these experiences might interrelate. Within the complex layers that were common to all the participants, the researcher attempted to interpret and make sense of phenomena across all cases, while respecting and recognizing the meanings that each participant brought to the interview.

The results of this study were consistent with findings from previous studies that suggested maintaining a lesbian identity is an ongoing task, continually informed by events and relationships that typically occur during the lifespan of an individual. However, in the course of this investigation, the findings pointed to a new understanding—the coming out process becomes more complicated when histories of childhood sexual abuse need to be considered. While family and social factors had powerful influences on coming out for all the participants, the emotional and behavioral strategies that each woman adapted in order to cope with long-term sequelae of CSA, also appeared to have considerable impact on the coming out process as well.
This is for my daughters, Becky and Dina.
I am endlessly amazed by their grace, wisdom, and inner light.
Acknowledgements

I owe much to Dr. Hildy Getz and Dr. Penny Burge whose constructive recommendations were guideposts along this journey. Their support for this project was an inspiration to me. Dr. Burge’s knowledge of, and commitment to, the field of qualitative research greatly enhanced my faith that, with perseverance and hard work, truths shall ultimately emerge. I owe a great deal to Dr. Marcie Boucouvalas, who introduced me to the concept that there are rich, non-traditional sources of knowing, and whose own being defines humanism, as well as erudition. I would also like to express my appreciation to Dr. Lynette Long and Dr. Kerri-Lynn Kriz for their reading of this manuscript and their invaluable suggestions and encouragement.

I am especially grateful to my good friend, Kathy Brackett, not only for her editorial expertise, but also for her insightful questions and comments. I would like to express my appreciation to my friend and mentor, Linda McCullough for demonstrating the meaning of excellent counseling. Thanks also to Ben Schapiro, whose knowledge and love for languages, metaphors, and linguistics is sometimes astounding, and always fun.

I am indebted to my daughters, Rebecca Molloy and Dina Schapiro, who not only provided me with unwavering love and support, but have also given me invaluable reactions to the form and content of my work. My small community of family and friends also continually supported me with an abundance of concern and patience over the years.

I owe a deep debt of gratitude to the women who agreed to participate in this study; they drew upon their courage to tell their stories, in the hope that something positive might emerge from their life experiences, and transform their suffering into meaningful knowledge.
Table of Contents

List of Tables viii

Chapter 1: Introduction 1

  Background 1
  Statement of the Problem 2
  Purpose of the Study 3
  Significance of the Study 3
  Research Questions 3
  Assumptions of the Study 4
  Limitations of the Study 4
  Definition of Terms 5
  Summary of Chapter 1 8

Chapter 2: Review of Literature 10

  Lesbian Identity Formation 10
  Internalized Homophobia 13
  Homophobia 17
  Childhood Sexual Abuse (CSA) 19
    Background 19
    Defining CSA 20
    Perpetrators and patterns of CSA 21
    Treatment issues and therapy 21
    Long-term effects of CSA 22
    Remembering the abuse 24
    Sexual orientation and CSA 25
  Hermeneutic-Phenomenological Approach 27
    The development of hermeneutic-phenomenology 27
    The relationship of hermeneutic-phenomenology to this study 29
  Summary of Chapter 2 33

Chapter 3: Methodology 34

  Research Design 34
    Research participants 35
    Definition 35
    Number of participants 35
    Settings 36
  Collecting Empirical Materials 36
    The interview 36
    Interview guide 37
    Researcher experience 37
Summary of Chapter 4

Chapter 5: Discussion, Implications, and Conclusions

Addressing the research questions 173
  Essences of experience 174
  Variations of experience 180
  Outcomes of the research compared with the literature 182
  Lesbian identity development 182
    Internalized homophobia 183
    Homoprejudice: societal attitudes, behavior, and public policy 183
    Childhood sexual abuse 184
  Topics for future inquiry 185
    Personal outcomes 186
    Implications for the field of counseling 187
    Social implications 187
  Summary of Chapter 5 188
  Conclusions 188

References 190

List of Appendixes 203

Appendix A — Interview Guide 204
Appendix B — Information for Participants 205
Appendix C — Consent Form 206
Appendix D — Interview Transcriptions 207
  Olivia 207
  Sheree 215
  Marina 225
  Kitt 236
  Tess 250
  Laura 263
  Phia 276
  Leonie 292
  Harriet 304
  Jasmine 316
Appendix E — Initial Categories 327

Curriculum Vitae 330
List of Tables

Table 1
Research Questions in Relation to Interview Questions 37

Table 2
First Iteration: Sample of Initial Categories 161

Table 3
Second Iteration: Sample Comparison Within and Across Categories 163

Table 4
Four Iterations: An Overview of the Interpretive Process 165

Table 5
Abridged Biographic Information About the Participants 181