The Leading Edge: Outcomes Achieved by Residence Hall Association Leaders

Patrick I. Romero-Aldaz

(ABSTRACT)

Researchers suggest that there are many outcomes associated with involvement in student clubs and organizations. Research also indicates that positive outcomes are associated with serving in leadership positions. Residence Hall Association (RHA) leaders are college students who are involved in a specific type of organization, based in the residence halls with specific aims to improve the quality of life and enhance leadership skill development. Studies to assess the outcomes associated with the RHA leadership experience, however, are limited. The purpose of this study was to examine the skills achieved by RHA leaders.

Data were gathered by administering the Student Leadership Outcomes Inventory (SLOI) to all RHA Presidents and National Communications Coordinators (NCCs) of NACURH, Inc. during the spring of 2001. The SLOI is a 60-item instrument designed to measure the outcomes of leadership experiences on seven scales. Respondents rate items on a Likert-type scale with responses ranging from “Strongly agree” to “Strongly disagree.”

Data were analyzed to determine if outcomes associated with RHA leadership differed by: type of position (President versus NCC), age, sex, race (minority v. majority), status of advisor (professional versus graduate student), and size of on-campus population (< 900 v. 1000+). Additionally data were analyzed to determine if there were any interaction effects between the status of advisor and size of on-campus population.

Results revealed significant differences by sex on six of the seven scales, status of advisor on the technology scale, and type of position on the self-confidence scale. The data provide information for Residence Education administrators, RHA leaders, and the national board of NACURH, Inc. regarding outcomes achieved by RHA leaders. Using the results of this study, these parties can work to further promote leadership development among RHA officers and members.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Writing this thesis has been one of the most educational processes I have ever encountered. I have learned more about myself than I ever thought possible. This study would have never been completed had I not been blessed with the guidance and support of many people.

I would first like to thank God for blessing me with a full life and providing me the opportunity to pursue my goals and dreams. Many times my faith has been tried, in those I have been carried through and for that I am thankful.

Next, I would like to thank my family, especially my parents, Dan and Frieda and my Grandparents, Alfred and Amelia, for the unconditional love and support each of you has given throughout my life. If it were not for the sacrifices you have made, I may not have accomplished so much. I would also like to dedicate this work to the memory of those that have passed before me and to the spirit of those who are still unborn. This life is but a part of the journey to an unknowable end, and I am but part of the history.

To my friends and colleagues, thank you for your support. The friendships that have grown in these two years I will cherish forever. Each of you has helped me to become a better person and for that I thank you.

Finally, thank you to my committee. Thank you Ed and Gerry for always being willing to lend a hand and support me in my endeavors. To Melinda, thank you for your help with the SLOI and the opportunities you have provided me. I would like to especially acknowledge and thank Joan Hirt my thesis Director. Not only would this have not happened without your “encouragement” and guidance, I am forever indebted for the time and energy you have put into helping me be successful in this endeavor and in life. Thank you.

According to African Proverbs, it takes a village to raise a child. This study is the incarnation of these words. Indeed, it has taken a great deal of work from a great many people to become a reality. For this commitment I am forever grateful.
