Alexandria, Virginia is located next to Washington D.C. in the middle of the Eastern seaboard of the United States and is amid one of the world’s largest deciduous forests. Alexandria was founded in the 1800’s and is complete with Cobble stone streets, brick sidewalks, and town homes in what is now called the Old Town Historic District adjacent to the Potomac River. Alexandria has a revitalized waterfront which is home to many fine restaurants and historic attractions. The streets of Old Town are laid out in a grid system perpendicular to the Potomac River. The only open square in Old Town is Market Square which is in front of the Old Court House Building and is home to the nation’s oldest continuously operating farmers market. The main intersection of Old Town is Washington Street stretching North and South and King Street, East to West.

The site for The Times Square Civic Center for the Performing Arts is on the 1200 Block of King Street and is an 8 minute walk from the King Street Metro Station which connects visitors to all parts of the Washington Metropolitan area in minutes. The King Street Metro station is adjacent to the Amtrak Railway Station with trains running from New York to Miami. The site is located at the convergence of Commerce Street which runs at an angle to the grid system.

The City of Alexandria has an Architectural Review Board which oversees all improvements and new construction which fall within their historic districts. The site for Times Square falls within their jurisdiction.
