

Table of Contents

Abstract		ii
Acknowledgments		v
Chapter One	Toward a Philosophy of Science and Technology Studies: Meta-Science, Scientific Practice, and the Natural World	1
	1.1 General Introduction	1
	1.2 Argument Summary	7
	1.3 STS Orthodoxy	9
	1.4 Philosophical Agnosticism	12
	1.5 Regarding Post-Positivism and STS	14
	1.6 Conclusion	21
Chapter Two	Scripting the Radical Critique of Science and Technology: STS, The Morrill Act, and the American Land-Grant University	24
	2.1 General Introduction	24
	2.2 Argument Summary	25
	2.3 The Morrill Act	28
	2.4 Elements of the Received View of STS History	36
	2.5 Peripatetic Administrators	40
	2.6 Conclusions	43
Chapter Three	Revolutionizing the Structure of STS: Bringing to Light Thomas Kuhn's Noble Lie	44
	3.1 General Introduction	44
	3.2 Argument Summary	46
	3.3 Kuhn's Influence	51
	3.4 Kuhn's Blueprint	55
	3.5 Developmental Theory as the Culture of Science	58
	3.5.1 Preface	58
	3.5.2 Piaget, Bruner and Goodman	59
	3.6 Kuhnian Pedagogy and Interdisciplinarity	64
	3.7 Conclusions	69

Chapter Four	What Is A Context?	72
	4.1 General Introduction	72
	4.2 Argument Summary	74
	4.3 Contextual Definition	77
	4.4 'Context' In STS	80
	4.4.1 Context as Used in the Handbook of Science and Technology Studies	83
	4.5 Social Epistemology and Context	91
	4.5.1 Contingentism and the Canon	94
	4.6 Contextual Values	99
	4.7 Conclusion	103
Chapter Five	The Study of Science and Technology: What Went Wrong?	105
	5.1 General Introduction	105
	5.2 Argument Summary	106
	5.3 What Went Wrong?	107
	5.3.1 Social Acceptance	108
	5.3.2 No Privilege	109
	5.3.3 Explanatory Symmetry	112
	5.3.4 Actor's Categories	113
	5.3.5 Good STS?	114
	5.3.6 The "Middle Way"	116
	5.4 Postconstructivist STS	118
	5.5 Dissertation Perspectives	119
	5.6 Future Work	123
References		126