All authors should be familiar with copyright laws applicable to their unpublished and published works. Official information is available from the Library of Congress/US Copyright Office at http://www.copyright.gov. Virginia Tech’s Digital Library and Archives also maintains helpful copyright information at http://scholar.lib.vt.edu/copyright/

Your Copyright

Copyright registration is not a prerequisite for copyright protection. You become the copyright owner of your ETD as soon as you create it. It is not necessary to register copyright to receive protection. You do not have to file a form, pay a fee, or make a statement of ownership.

While it is not a legal requirement that you make a copyright statement, it is appropriate to do so in order to remind your readers that you, as the author, own the copyright to your ETD. We recommend a copyright notice on the title page that consists of at least the word copyright, the copyright symbol, year of publication, and your name as the owner.

Other possibilities: Consider a Creative Commons License

Attribution Non-commercial or Creative Commons

This license is used on the Creative Commons homepage and by the University of Texas at Austin’s Copyright Crash Course (http://www.utsystem.edu/ogc/intellectualproperty/cprtindx.htm)

This license lets others remix, tweak, and build upon your work non-commercially, and although their new works must also acknowledge you and be non-commercial, they don’t have to license their derivative works on the same terms.

Others are free to
- to Share — to copy, distribute and transmit the work
- to Remix — to adapt the work

Under the following conditions:
- Attribution. You must attribute the work in the manner specified by the author or licensor (but not in any way that suggests that they endorse you or your use of the work).
- Noncommercial. You may not use this work for commercial purposes.
- For any reuse or distribution, you must make clear to others the license terms of this work. The best way to do this is with a link to the Creative Common.
- Any of the above conditions can be waived if you get permission from the copyright holder.
- Nothing in this license impairs or restricts the author’s moral rights.
Acknowledge Others Copyrights

If you have included illustrations (e.g., figures, tables, photographs, and the like) created by others in your ETD, you must appropriately cite the source of each illustration. You must also submit letters and/or emails documenting that (1) the copyright holder (e.g., photographer, author, creator, etc.) gives you permission to use their materials, and/or (2) your statement of consideration of the four fair use factors and determination that your use is fair. The Graduate School needs evidence that you have some claim to copyright.

If your ETD is in the Manuscript Style and will include article(s) submitted for publication, you must retain some of your copyrights or, if you assign them to the publisher, include the letter that gives you permission to reproduce the published article in your ETD. You should also include this in your title page copyright statement.

All other material © 2008 by Jane Z. Student

If you have included illustrations (e.g., figures, tables, photographs, and the like) created by others in your manuscript-style ETD, you must not only appropriately cite the source of each illustration but your publisher will require proof of permission to use copyrighted illustrations because fair use is more difficult to justify for commercial publications.

Citations in Last Appendix

A new policy is evolving at Virginia Tech which may require that each ETD include as the last (or perhaps only) appendix an annotated list of illustrations (e.g., figures, tables, photographs, and the like), which includes:

- Number
- Citation—according to the style and format used in your department/program area/college
- Copyright statement, either
  - Letter of permission from the copyright holder
  - Fair use determination
  - Public domain
  - ETD author as creator statement

At the end of this list the following statement should be signed by the ETD author’s committee chair: [Jane Z. Student] has appropriately considered copyright.

Good Sources of Image Citation Information

These websites are particularly helpful. They explicitly list each element that should be included in the reference citation and they provide examples in some of the popular citation styles (e.g., MLA, APA, Chicago, etc.). The examples that follow are based on these websites:

Citing a Web Site

Library of Congress homepage

“The homepage of the Library of Congress connects users to Web sites created by staff members of the Library's many divisions. The sites are often posted without a clear indication of author, title, publisher or copyright date. In this case, list the "Library of Congress" as the author. Look for available clues and give as much information as possible, including the URL and date accessed.”
